English translation

I'll tell you guys a story about what our parents did at the place that's called Lillooet Lake. There were a bunch of them in the one house, I don't know exactly how many. There were quite a few houses there.

So we used to go there to fish. We would go there in the evening, when we were finished working. Then they barbequed fish, and they made dried fish, and salt salmon. Everybody went. They made barbequed fish, and then they sold each for one dollar. It was very cheap, and the young people liked them. They didn't know how to cook, so they bought them. "One dollar – oh my god!".

So we went there one time, because my couches in Vancouver had got changed. So I told my husband that we should bring this one down the lake, they may like it. So we brought the couch, it was still good, although we had owned it for a long time, and they liked it. So then they sat around and told us stories about what they did.

One time my mother made me a barbecued fish. Then I fixed it, I took the sticks off that had been used. And then she gave me some tinfoil, and then I just fixed it up really nicely. Then they started telling stories again and so I forgot my fish.

It was dark in the house, and so they couldn't see it. We left and went back to Vancouver. "Oh my", I told them¹, "I forgot my fish, I wonder what they'll do with it." One week must have passed, and then they smelled it, they were wondering what was smelling bad in the house. It turned out it must have been my fish! "Oh my" my mother said then, "she must have forgotten her fish!".

¹ Laura notes that "them" refers to her husband and kids who were in the car with her on the way back to Vancouver.
